SPIRITUAL MARRIAGES.

A Spiritualist Attacks the Marriage Laws of the Union. Mrs. H. S. Lake of Boston delivered an interesting address at the meeting of spiritualists at G. A. R. Hall yesterday morning. She took for her subject "L we and marriage spiritually considered," and by the course of her lecture touched upon the question of divorce in a manner not at all comforting to the satisficorce agiliators.

Mrs. Lake stated in the begining of her nddress that she represented Margaret Fuller and it was the spirit of that famous woman which set forth the views to which she now gives utterance. She felt no little concern, she said, in speaking upon the subject because it was one which might lead to misapprehension by the people.

upon the subject because it was one which might lead to misapprehension by the people.

Love in this world, the speaker said, is perverted, but when persons are spiritually in love there is a profound equilibrium. "The laws that bind men and women together in most States of the Union," she said, "the most liberal portion of the world are covenants with hell and contracts with death." This sentiment was loudly applauded by the audience, and Mrs. Lake or Margaret Fuller, as she called herself, then entered upon a lengthy discourse upon the marriage state and conjugal love. She advises all thoses who are ill-mated to seek relief by separation or divorce.

The Boy Was Innocent.

On Saturday afternoon Officer Kendall found a young white boy attempting to sell a diamond carring on Pennsylvania accute for a trifling sum. At Galt's jewelry store the boy offered the jewel for $3, but he was told by the man to whom he applied that the stone was worth at least $150. Officer Kendall arrested the lad on suspicion and took him to the lad on suspicion and took him to the lad on suspicion and took him to the lad end of the Weifflh-street station, where he gave the rame of Charles Williams. He claimed that he had found the carring in the Globe Theatre. In the meantime it was accretained that it was the property of Mrs. Roop, wife of one of the propertors of the theatre, and was worth $40). In the Police Court this morning Judge Miller allowed the boy to go on his perseual bend, as he said he was satisfied that the boy had not stolen it. ell a diamond carring on Pennsylvania

Canal Bridges to be Repaired.
A decision by the Attorney for the District holds that the Commissioners have no right to expend the finances of the Distriet in repairing the street bridges cross-ing the C. & O. Canal in Georgetown. As these bridges have been rotten and unsafe and closed for some time, vain efforts were made to induce the courts to order their repair while the District tribunals held jurisdiction in the small as 17. jurisdiction in the canal cases. The atten-tion of the new proprietors of the canal will be called to the matter, and they will be obliged to put the bridges in good

Dr. Parsons' Elequent Sermon. Interesting services were held yesterday at the Church of the Reformation, the choir repeating the Christmas music "The Secret of Christmas" was the subject of an excellent discourse by the pastor, Dr. Parsons. "The Children of Betheliem" was sung by the Sunday-school at night, and recitations were rendered by Miss Maud Hunter and Mr. Elliott Kramer. To-morrow evening the Christmas tree will delight the children.

Praising Masonry. Rev. J. R. Schultz preached on the subject of Freemasonry to an audience that crowded Fletcher M. E. Church last night. the prefaced his address with the remark that there were two things in his life for which he had never apologized, his connection with the pulpit and the ancient order of Freemasoury. Mr. Schultz then in a most cloquent oration told his hearers of the foundation of Masoury and the good resulting from it.

"Is Life Worth Living?" Rev. Frank Sewell answered, from a churchman's point of view, the question, "Is Life Worth Living?" at the New Church, on Dupont Circle, last evening. The factors which made life attractive were the higher and nobler ends of life, and life is worth living because it is God's gift.

LOCAL TALKS.

What Men, Prominent and Otherwise, Find to Interest Them. Captain Joseph C. Grannan, exchief o olive of Concinnati, and now manager o police of Concinnati, and now manager of the celebrated detective agency bearing his name—My first case? Well, it was a rather curious one, and may interest you. When a more bey I resided in the West, and at the age of 16 became a victim of the "detective fever," not, however, from reading often ovels, for I nover road the first page of one in my life.

Hearing of a band of counterfeiters who were showing the queer in New York, and ascertaining that a large reward had been effert for their apprehension. I determined to go to the metropolis and see if it were not passible to locate the "Shovers," Having no one to whom I could look for aid or shelter, it only took me a short time to park a few belongings and get to New York.

Having no one to whom I could look for shelter, it only took meashort time to pack a few belongings and get to New York.

Now I am, and have been, over since I have been in the business, a great believer in back, for I have never handled a difficult case in which it did not take a 'streak of luck' to get a good clus. I had no scorer arrived in the great city and boarled a herse-car for Harlem before a genteeliesking man, of perhaps 40 years of age, at it, and a flered the conductor a two-dollar silver certificate, from which his fare was to be taken. The conductor clesely examined the bill, and went to the near platform of the car and showed it to an old gentleman, who shook his head negatively after he had examined the money. The original possessor of the bill saw this and jumped off the car, with me cleve behind.

He bearded the next car and you may rest assured I was there, too. This time he tendered for his fare another bill of a like denomination and received his change with a smile.

He went up as far as Seventy-third street and walked about a mile up Third syence toward Harlem. Going as far as Ninety-ninth street he stopped and waited, and I went into a cheap restaurant to get something to cat, and to watch the man at the same time.

He was joined by another in about twenty minutes and together they went to an old church at the foot of Ninety-ninth street. No light was visible, but the men seemed to know the ground quite well for they waiked to the rear of the structure, which had long since been abandoned, and entered by a little door, scarcely over eighteen inches wide. A few seconds later a flash of light was visible, only for nintart, when all was dark again.

I cautiously appreached the building, but not a sound could I hear, although the night was clear, cool, and dark. I entered the rear window, being unable to unfasten the door, which was locked with a spring.

After getting inside all was quiet and still, but I had not been there many minutes before a trap-door in the floor near the main entranc

the low rumbling noise of some very fine machinery. When the men had left the church I was determined that they should not be lest to me, and I got out of the building as soon as possible and made my way to the nearest police station, where I informed the Captain of what I had disc xeered and requested that he send a few men with me to the church to secure the men at work there.

with me to the church to secure the men at work there.

He listened quietly, and when I had finished my narrative I was advised by the captain to go home and stop reading cheap literature. I was persistent, but my entreaties were of no avail. Several efficers who were off dety until midnight put more feith in my story than did their superior officers, and they concluded to go with me.

We approached stealthily and entered

We approached stealthily and entered. In a short time we found the trap door, and, when it was slowly and silentify raised, four men engaged in the, to them, highly laudable occupation of making money, in which the defects were almost as hard to detect as in the bills turned out by the notorious Miles Ogle, who was recently captured at home by Detectives Donella and Bauer and sentenced to twenty years, at Memphis, week before last.

The officers made a leap into the cellar, and, being at a disadvantage, the "shovers" jumped upon them, and pistol-shots were exchanges, but fortunately no one was hurt on either side. The officers ironed the men and landed them safely in the station-house, and a short time later they were sent up the river.

Pete McCartney, John Smith, Frank Reno, and Mike Rogers composed the crowd, and since that time they have become famous lawbreakers. This was in 1868, but they broke jail, and McCartney went to Missouri, where the rest of the gang and Miles Ogle joined him.

The men succeeded in cluding the officers of the law and made a very flue bill, which was "shoved" all over the country. Ogle stole $75,000 of the money and came to Cincinnati and succeeded in passing the major portion of it. In 1871 Ogle was arrested in Pittsburg and forfeited a $15,000 bond, and a year later was arrested in Philadelphia for engraving $5 plates, which he surrendered. Promising to work for the Government he was released on small bail. When arrested in Callin Station, Pa., McCartney and Ogle had in their possession $22,000 worth of counterfeit money. They were caught, but Pete escaped and Ogle went up for eight years and was fined $5,000.

He was arrested several times since then, having made money for which he was arrested a short time ago. He is now languishing in the Tennessee penitentary for the same offense.

Arthur Blanchard—The trials that expressmen are subjected to during the holiday season would exhaust the patience of a saint. Yesterday, through all the cold and snow, over the roughest roats in th

George W. Munsie—It strikes me that the mail wagons and express wagons are allowed entirely too much latitude in Washington. They swing around a corner or cross an intersecting street at a rapid rate of speed, and do not seem to care whether they run down pedestrians or not. Congress took some steps last year to prevent fast driving upon the streets of the District. The attention of Congress tought to be called to the rate of speed at which the Senate and House mail wagons drive to and from the Capitol.

Mr. T. B. Marche—I believe that next year the temperance organizations of the District will make more rapid progress than ever before. Some of the old time workers are back in harness again and have their shoulders to the wheel. There are some very strong temperance organizations the District workers are back in harness again and have their shoulders to the wheel. There have their shoulders to the wheel. There are some very strong temperance organisations in the Iristrict and good work can be confidentially expected.

Colonel James Jolly—This cold map and show knocks out anything I have seen in Iowa for years, and it seems to get nearer your skin than most cold spells. The people of Washington seem to be prepared for most any kind of weather. I had no idea a hundred sleighs could be found in the entire city, but Saturday's carnival showed otherwise.

A Car Conductor—Yes, we have quite a diversity of experience, and now and then some very amusing things happen on the cars. A few days since I was coming down Fennsylvania avenue southeast with a pretty fair load. At Second and B streets two more gentleman boarded my car, one of them being a particularly stout man, weighing probably 250 pounds. By a little moving up and some squeezing my fat passenger managed to secure a seat, and without ceremony his jolly companion of lighter build plumped himself into the lap of the corpulent gentleman. At the next corner an old colored "aunty," shining black and broad as she was long, was taken aboard. The seats being all occupied, it looked as though she would have to swing on to a strap. But the fat man's friend came to her resene, and arising from the soft broad knew of his associate he said, with a 'gracious how to the old lady, "Madam have my seat." A roar of language was up from the passengers, and the portly gentleman beat a heaty retreat to the front of the car to talk polities with the driver.

Temperance Talks.

The Metropolitan Church held a large ongregation yesterday afternoon when congregation yesterday afternoon when an interesting temperance meeting took place. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, president of the non-partisan Women's Christian Temperance Union, presided and on the platform with her were Rev. Anna Shaw, Mrs. Amanda Smith, the widely-known African missionary, Mrs. Bishop Newman, Mrs. Ada M. Brittenbender of Nebraska and Rev. J. E. Bown (colored), pastor of Asbury Church. Mrs. Bishop Newman made a spirited address in which she attacked the liquor traffic on every side, closing by stating her intention of going on a regular temperance revival tour with Rev. Amanda Smith.

Mrs. Smith followed her and talked of the effect of whisky in heathen lands. She sang 'Some Way or Other, the Lord will Provide."

Bishop Newman then ascended the pulpit, which he had occupied for so many years, and pronounced the benediction.

School Teachers on a Holiday Trip. A big crowd of holiday excursionists will arrive in Washington this evening over the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania Roads. The party consists of over 800 school teachers, most of them from Brooklyn and the surrounding towns of New York, New Jersey and Connection.
They are under the charge of Mr. W. W.
Lord, Jr., and Miss Schaeffer acts as chaperone. The excursion is a purely pleasure one, and, after seeing the sights of the Capital City, the school marms and masters will return to their homes on Wednesday evening. During their stay here they will be quartered at Willard's, the Metropolitan, National, Ebbitt, Normandie and other hotels.

The swell hotels and clubs in New York is well as those in this city, made a feature as well as those in this city, made a feature of Christmas mean cards. Among the novel and attractive ones in New York were those furnished by the Hotel Vendome and Hotel Mariborough, that of the latter being in the shape of a palette, the leaves being held together by a wide ribbon of pale pink watered silk, terminating in a large bow. On the front cover was a painting, in oil colors, of a young couple engaged in the blissful occupation of making eyes at each other. The damsel was coyly holding a bouquet just beyond her admirer's reach.

On Christmas eye a number of colored scople became involved in a dispute at the people became involved in a dispute at the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Chase, on Reeve street, and it was claimed in Police Court this morning that Solomon Williams had pulled out a revolver and threatened to shoot Richard Chase. Several witnesses testified that Williams had a revolver while others declared that it was only a tin horn that he pulled out of his overcout pocket. The testimony was very conflicting, and Judge Miller gave the prisoner the benefit of the doubt and dismissed the charge of carrying concealed weapons.

A Crap Shooter Fined. James Washington, a colored coach-man in the employ of Colonel Manning, was brought into the Police Court to-day was brought into the Police Court to-day by Officer Kraemer. Some time ago Washington and a number of other boys were found engaged in a game of crap in South Washington. Washington was too fleet-footed for the officer and succeeded in getting away, but he arrested him at his home. He denied that he was engaged in the game at all. Judge Miller allowed the prisoner to go by paying a fine of $5. There is also a case of assault pending against Washington.

Rey. A. D. Mayo of Boston, preached at All Souls' Church last night on "The Woman's Movements in the South," He woman's Movements in the South." He spoke interestingly for some time, arguing that the women of the South have been generally misunderstood, and said that the one need of the Southern white women of every class was emancipation from the spell cast over executive energies by the very constitution of society into which she was born. He further urged Northsern women to help the South to sdapt itself to the new conditions.
